“Identity as an Institution and the Origins of Ethnic Orders”

Thomas Pepinsky
Cornell University

Tuesday, October 2, 2018
12:15 – 1:45 PM

Johns Hopkins University SAIS
BOB Building, Room 736
1717 Massachusetts Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20036

Thomas Pepinsky specializes in comparative politics and international political economy, with a focus on emerging markets and a special interest in Southeast Asia. He is the author, most recently, of Piety and Public Opinion: Understanding Indonesian Islam (Oxford University Press, 2018, with R. William Liddle and Saiful Mujani), and his work also appears in the American Journal of Political Science, International Studies Quarterly, Journal of Democracy, Political Analysis, World Development, World Politics, and other venues. Currently, he is working on issues relating to identity, politics, and political economy in comparative and international politics. He is a member of the steering committee of the Association for Analytical Learning on Islam and Muslim Societies (aalims.org), and recently helped to found the Southeast Asian Research Group (seareg.org) in order to highlight the best new contemporary research on Southeast Asian politics in North America.