What is the Hopkins-Nanjing Center?

中心简介

Over 25 years of the Hopkins-Nanjing Center

A Unique Partnership in China

The Hopkins-Nanjing Center for Chinese and American Studies (HNC) opened in 1986 as a one-of-a-kind educational collaboration between The Johns Hopkins University and Nanjing University. Located on the downtown campus of Nanjing University, the Center upholds the highest American and Chinese academic standards in the pursuit of educating future leaders. The HNC brings together American students and those from other countries (known collectively as international students) with Chinese students in three graduate program options:

- One-year certificate
- Two-year Master of Arts in International Studies (M.A.I.S.)
- Five-semester option in Nanjing and Washington, D.C.

International students take most of their courses in Chinese taught by Chinese faculty, while Chinese students are taught by international faculty with courses primarily in English. This target language curriculum is a unique feature of the HNC program that gives our graduates a competitive edge in the increasingly dynamic world of Sino-global relations.

Open Academic and Cultural Exchange

The HNC is the only China-based international program where the state-of-the-art facilities are spaces for genuinely free and open academic exploration and intellectual dialogue. At the heart of the Center is its superior research library featuring more than 120,000 volumes in English and Chinese, 400 periodicals and the electronic assets of both The Johns Hopkins University and Nanjing University.

Improve your spoken and written Chinese, engage in serious bilingual research and enter a select community of scholars dedicated to the study of Sino-American relations

What Academic Programs are offered?

Nanjing

"Completing a Chinese language thesis was very useful as it acted as preparation for my internship with the European Union External Action Service. I still use the knowledge gained during the process of writing the thesis in my current job and it was a great boost for my written Chinese. It is during this process that you learn the most about the ins-and-outs of working in China at a practical level."

Carlos Casanova Allende | M.A.I.S. '11 |
Consultant | Ecofys

The Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS), a division of The Johns Hopkins University, gives its students a truly international perspective on today's global issues. A worldwide reach—with locations in Washington, D.C., Bologna, Italy, and Nanjing, China—allows Hopkins-Nanjing Center students the opportunity to choose between two study options in Nanjing or to combine their studies in China with programs in other regions of the world.

"The Hopkins-Nanjing Center and SAIS are among the best academic programs in preparing the next generation of leaders, and I find myself running into capable and competent alumni in all levels of the workplace. Having lived in China and studied with Chinese professors and students, I have a unique perspective in viewing the U.S.-China relationship. I work on issues relating to China on a daily basis, and there is no doubt that my experience at HNC prepared me well for a government career."

Jeffrey Tang | Certificate '09 & SAIS M.A. '10 Five-Semester Option | Foreign Affairs Officer | U.S. Department of State

Career Services

HNC provides a variety of career development resources and an on-site career counselor to help students market their unique skill sets to employers around the world. Joining a global network of more than 2,200 alumni, HNC graduates are prepared to become part of an elite cohort of international leaders.

Annual Career Programming — HNC hosts a series of major events to ensure that graduates have a solid foundation in each stage of career planning. Weekend-long seminars with human resource experts and industry specialists hone students' skills for career planning, networking, resume and cover letter composition, interviewing and professional etiquette.

Career Day — This annual event in Shanghai gives students the opportunity to interact with professionals and HNC alumni currently working in China. The day includes a series of panel presentations and opportunities to network with real employers. Many students have made valuable contacts at this event that ultimately led to job offers after graduation.

Direct Recruiting — Private sector employers regularly send representatives to directly recruit from the HNC student body. Recent companies include:

- Apple
- CEBM
- Deloitte
- The Edge
- Z-Ben Advisors

SAIS Career Services Support – Students also have access to the online resources of the SAIS Office of Career Services, including an online job and internship database, resume collections, skills courses, and a wide range of other functions. HNC students are also invited to participate in an annual SAIS/HNC joint Career Trek through Hong Kong, Shanghai and Beijing. The trip trains students to leverage their China expertise to its fullest advantage with SAIS's international employer network.

Lectures

HNC hosts weekly lectures in both English and Chinese exclusively for the Center community. In recent years the HNC has welcomed leaders in policy, business, law, and academia including:

- Gary Locke, U.S. Ambassador to China
- David M. Lampton, SAIS Director of China Studies
- Cui Tiankai, Chinese Ambassador to the U.S.
- Jane Holl Lute, Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security

Hassenfeld Social Enterprise Fund

Made possible by a grant from the Hassenfeld Family Foundation, Certificate and M.A.I.S. students compete annually to create innovative, sustainable projects that address a social need in the Nanjing community.

HNC-SAIS Joint Research Trips

Hopkins-Nanjing Center students often have the opportunity to collaborate with SAIS students and faculty on China research trips throughout the academic year. Recently, HNC students have been selected to take part in trips throughout the country in conjunction with SAIS programs including:

- China Studies
- Latin American Studies
- Energy, Resources and Environment

Mini-Courses

Several times each semester, HNC hosts renowned practitioners from a wide range of fields to offer short-term, intensive courses geared toward providing a hands-on look at a particular aspect of Sino-global relations beyond the normal HNC curriculum. Recent examples include:

- "Chinese Labor in Its Domestic and International Contexts"
- "Global Climate Change and Environmental Law Response"
- "Private Equity in China"
- "Analyzing Political Risk in Asia"

M.A.I.S. Research and Internship Funding

M.A.I.S. students are encouraged to apply through the HNC for funding to support thesis research and internship opportunities during breaks. Each year, grants are made available so that students can expand the scope of their study and enhance their professional experience both within China and throughout the world.

"Thanks to a Hopkins-Nanjing Center research grant that I received, I traveled to Kenya, Tanzania and South Africa in January of 2012 to conduct field research on China's use of educational initiatives to increase its soft power in Africa. In total, I met with over 100 teachers, students and local community members to assess their impressions of Confucius Institutes and the impact that these institutes have had on their lives. Research opportunities like this combined with language and cultural immersion make for a top-notch M.A. program."
